

Question:

Salaam,

If someone marries a rich wife, is it permissible for the wife to pay for food, and other luxuries, even if the wife insists.

Answer:

Assalamu Aleikum

Sheikh Omar has answered this before as follows:

It is permissible for the wife to pay for food and other luxuries but it is not obligatory upon her to do so. As long as it is understood by both husband and wife that it is done as a favour from her, that it does not effect his qawama (authority) over her and that the husband has the right to reject it. However if the husband does not want to work and prefers to live off her money then this has been cursed by Allah.
